

SENIORS:

At Last

At last it arrived, the day we had been awaiting for 11 years. We were Seniors, top dogs. As usual, the first days of school were hot and miserable. No amount of Mountain Dew could prepare us for the sweat of football and volleyball practices. Kim Altom's favorite subject was horses, while Lynda Beachner wowed us all with her New Wave outfits. Mike Blackburn talked incessantly about his career in medicine and continued to wash dishes in the hospital kitchen. Brenda Born typed at least a million library cards; when she wasn't selling Avon. Marla Born ran for most absent senior. She was co-editor of the yearbook and had a real aversion for Mondays. Doug Bradshaw just couldn't make up his mind — so many women to choose from.

Mike Brogan told more jokes than other senior, some were even clean! Mike Brown enjoyed his new position as "assistant" principal during 5th hour. He worried a lot about how to abbreviate his title. Ruth was quiet as usual, but she seemed to learn a lot sitting with Charlie and Mike during Advanced Writing class. No one was surprised when Jeff

Church was selected class clown, but they did wonder why he didn't show up at the Sadie Hawkins dance until 10:00 p.m. After all, he was escorting the queen. Cathy Coomes, a woman of few words, expanded her horizons by taking a college speech class. Phyllis Diskin spent her free time buying more clothes.

SENIORS: Party Hearty

Tom Grillot used his creative abilities stuffing mail into the wrong boxes while he was 2nd hour office aid. John Lynch launched his acting career. Peggy McAtee continued hers playing a queen, a witch, and Mike Wilson's mother. Bill McClintick wore his long Johns in public. Mike O'Brien got his beauty rest during 6th hour every day. Kenny was still the smartest kid in the class. Charlie Schoenhofer had the most rubber bands, and Martin Vitt was definitely the quietest. Ed Westhoff worked hard and kept a low profile. Mike Wilson consumed more Doritos than the rest of the senior class combined and he had the biggest allowance.

We hit the big time with our own pop machine. The yearbook class sold donuts, and the pep club sold M&M's. We were in "pork out" heaven.
